ST. GEORGE'S DAY.

QUIET CELEBRATION IN HONGKONG.

RICH FINANCIAL HARVEST EXPECTED.

THE DISTRIBUTION OF "TOMBOLA" PRIZES.

The committee responsible for organizing the celebration of St. George's Day had this year a considerable amount of hard work without the recompense of any great spectacular success. Their reward—and it is a very practical and satisfying one—must come from the knowledge that their quiet and unostentatious labour has probably resulted in eclipsing all previous records as far as financial results are concerned. The unfortunate outbreak of cerebro-spinal meningitis interfered largely with the plan of campaign originally laid down. There would certainly have been some kind of fair, a gathering probably similar in character to that of Hogther Day, but it was considered advisable in the circumstances to avoid, as far as possible, the collection of large crowds. For the same reason the idea of producing "Pinkie and the Fairies" at the Theatre Royal was abandoned. The rehearsals meant bringing together large numbers of young folk when the epidemic was at its height. At one time, even the advisability of the Amateur Dramatic Society presenting "The Witness for the Defence" was questioned, but luckily, as events have turned out, this part of the programme was maintained. The spinal fever epidemic has been reduced to such limited proportions in the meantime that it is doubtful whether now the chances of spreading infection are above the normal. Naturally the great central attraction of the day would have been the Drawing of War Bonds if they could have been drawn, but here again there has had to be a postponement—not because of any prevailing epidemic, but because the time allowed for the sale of the necessary number of tickets was found to be far too short. The lottery, if lottery it may be called without giving offence to the Authorities, is being advertised practically throughout the length and breadth of the Far East, and it will take some weeks yet before the full effect of this propaganda is seen. The drawing, according to present arrangements, will take place in June.

THE TOMBOLA

The duo new feature in the St. George's Day Celebration was the "Tombola," and a very popular and highly successful method of raising funds it has proved to be. The idea of a Tombola for Hongkong is credited to Mrs. Montague Ede. Whether the suggestion came originally from this quarter or not there is no doubt that Mrs. Ede, helped, of course, by many other willing workers, had a great deal to do with putting the suggestion into practical shape. The Tombola was to all intents and purposes entirely in the hands of a Ladies' Committee, and it is extremely doubtful whether the men, if the matter had been left to them, could have done anything like so well. All the residents, as is known, were asked to give prizes from their superfluities and they responded liberally. Over 2,000 articles were received, and some of them were of very considerable value. The past week has been "Tombola" week; everyone has been buying or selling spools. Every hundred spools contained six prizes, and as there were, as stated, 2,000 prizes, it does not mean much calculation to find out how many spools should have been issued or how much will be realised by the sale of them at a dollar each. There were a few hundreds unsold on Monday afternoon and these were auctioned at the City Hall and most of them were quickly disposed of. The drawing for the prizes took place the same evening—as may be imagined it was a work which kept half-a-dozen people busy for a good many hours—and all the holders of numbers now have to do is to collect their prizes. Many of them, indeed, were anxiously crowding round the show-rooms in Queen's Road at an early hour yesterday morning, and a band of energetic ladies, assisted by several soldiers, were kept very busy attending to all the details of the distribution. The doors were opened at 10.15 and a special constable had his work cut out to keep the crowd in order. It was very amusing to see what strange pranks the luck of the draw occasionally played. One young lady, who did not appear as if she required artificial spirits to stimulate her natural vivacity, came out shyly, burdened with a bottle of D. O. L.

whisky, while a young man followed her with a silver tea-spoon and a table centre. In another case, a lady was seen leaving with a pair of boxing gloves and she had to endure a good deal of banter from those waiting their turn. A third lady was the proud possessor of a banjo and informed the members of the queue that she was going down to the sands to earn her fortune. All day long the prizes were being distributed, but the work is not yet finished. The show-rooms will be kept open until the 30th, and it is hoped that all entitled to articles will have entered their claim by that date.

THE STREET COLLECTIONS.

The street sales differed from those on other "flag and banner" days chiefly by reason of the articles offered to the public. The ladies in their white dresses and patriotic ribbons and with their trays and collecting boxes were early astir, but, presumably, it was thought that the novelty of purchasing little emblems for the button-hole had worn off a little. Anyhow, while the badges and flags were still to be obtained, one was also given a choice of buying a toy balloon, a pocket edition of some well-known author, a Red Cross nurse doll so made that it might easily hide the presence of a whisky bottle and many other articles, both useful and ornamental. The badges were given by Mr. Grimshaw and many of the banners of St. George were presented to the Committee by Mr. Ho Kom Tong. The other articles came from a variety of sources. It is too early, of course, to judge of the financial results but as, on previous occasions, everyone purchased something, and this year they had a choice of buying anything from one to a hundred dollars and could get value for the money, there is little doubt that the Red Cross and other funds will benefit appreciably. Whether the Hongkong brokers are the most patriotic, or simply the most exuberant, members of the local community it is difficult to say. Somehow or other they always manage to enter into the spirit of the patriotic celebrations very heartily, and yesterday was no exception to the rule. Many of them decorated their conveyances with dozens of toy balloons, and darted from bank to bank as happy and as pleased as schoolboys, while those less fortunate ones who possess no ricksha would not be altogether outdone and made amends as far as possible by embellishing their hats and coats most profusely with patriotic favours. Several handsome looking little rickshaws, which were sent by their owners to perambulate the streets dressed in all the colours of the rainbow, attracted considerable attention and created much amusement. For the sake of the colour scheme it was unfortunate that more houses did not fly their flags and bunting.

THE HELPERS.

Nicholson, Lady Ho Tung and Friends, Mrs. Holyoak, Mrs. Aikin, Mrs. Titcher.

Mrs. Lander, Mrs. C. Forsyth, Mrs. Dyer, Mr. Landale, Mr. Downing, Mr. A. Nichol.

Grateful acknowledgments are also made to Mr. Ho Kom-tong, for kindly mounting all the flags; Mr. Grimshaw, for the gift of 3,000 metal badges; Miss Angel Ormiston for her services as lady chauffeur; Mr. Lauritsen and Mr. Komor, for inflating the balloons; Mrs. Anderson, Mrs. Milroy and Miss Loureiro, for making various articles for sale; and to all the ladies and children who so kindly made the large variety of pretty articles for the trays.

RAFFLES.

The number of the winning ticket in Mrs. Skelton's "Baby Doll" Raffle in aid of St. George's Day Fund is 97.

The doll raffled by Miss Madge Crapnell was won by ticket No. 25.

The winning number in the raffle of Miss Fairall's Dressed Doll with chair was 301.

THE HONGKONG CLUB.

The Hongkong Club, as last year, was thrown open to the lady friends of members and there was a large gathering for tiffin. An hour before the meal was whiled away pleasantly by the famous Punch and Judy show, of which Mr. R. Sutherland was the protagonist.

THE OFFICIALS.

The following are the officials who were responsible for the celebration as a whole. Naturally a great part of the work devolved upon a few, but this is inevitable and is by no means attributable to any unwillingness on the part of any one to do all in his or her power to contribute towards the day's success.

The General Committee was constituted as follows:—The Hon. Mr. P. H. Holyoak (President); Mr. N. J. Stabb (Vice-President); Messrs. H. H. J. Gompertz, G. S. Archbutt, H. W. Bird, C. Montague Ede, W. J. Eldridge, H. B. Hancock, L. N. Lee, Hon. H. E. Pollock, K.C., J. W. Graham, W. A. Dowley, A. G. Coppin, H. W. Looker, M. S. Northcote, H. J. Ramsay (Hon. Treasurer), and J. Bentley (Hon. Secretary).

SUB-COMMITTEES.

Entertainment Committee.—Messrs. H. W. Bird (Chairman), R. H. B. Hancock, W. J. Eldridge, T. L. Perkins, J. W. Graham, W. J. Tuteber, H. W. Prowse, W. A. Dowley, G. S. Archbutt, H. B. Bridger, J. H. Underwood, and J. Scott Harston.

War Bond Committee.—Hon. Mr. P. H. Holyoak (Chairman); Messrs. H. H. J. Gompertz, N. J. Stabb, C. Montague Ede, L. N. Lee, C. Bewick, and H. C. Sandford.

Finance Committee.—Messrs. N. J. Stabb (Chairman); C. Montague Ede, T. C. Downing, C. Champkin, and J. H. Ramsay.

Publicity Committee.—Messrs. A. G. Coppin, F. A. Perry, N. L. Watson, H. A. Cartwright, G. W. C. Barnett, and B. A. Hale.

Street Collection Committee.—Messrs. T. E. Pearce, W. A. Dowley, W. E. Roberts, A. H. Harris, J. W. Graham, T. Grimshaw, and J. H. Ramsay.

Theatre.—Mr. W. Sinclair.

Ladies' Committee.—Mrs. Holyoak and Mrs. Stabb. The indisposition of Mrs. Holyoak naturally threw a large proportion of the work on to Mrs. Stabb's shoulders. Mrs. Stabb, however, was indefatigable and has earned the sincere thanks of the community by the energetic and efficient manner in which her numerous duties were discharged. Mrs. Ralphs also rendered able assistance.

COMMITTEE'S THANKS.

The Committee desire to thank all those who helped them in their task and make special mention of Mr. H. P. White's services as auctioneer. A word should be added also in commendation of the work performed by Mr. Bentley, as Honorary Secretary.

MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

RECORD COLLECTION.

Sir R. V. Vassar-Smith, Bt., F.G.D., Provincial Grand Master of Gloucestershire, presided at the 75th anniversary festival of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, at the Connaught Rooms, Great Queen-street. Mr. W. Rosbury Few, P.A.G.D.C., secretary of the Institution, in announcing the result of the festival, stated that a record had been established both in regard to the number of Stewards (3068) and the aggregate collected (£28,890.10s.). Mr. James Stephens, treasurer of the Institution, stated that at the next committee meeting he would submit a motion to increase the annuities to the 1,400 old people now receiving benefit.

"THE WITNESS FOR THE DEFENCE."

When A. E. W. Mason's sensational play, "The Witness for the Defence," was first produced in 1911 the majority of the critics dealt at length with the subtlety of its conception and the air of mystery which, commencing in the dark shadows of a tent in the depths of India, was maintained to the end. Yet they hinted, also, at the rather weak finale to such a moving story. The only remedy was good, strong and emotional work on the part of "Stella Ballantyne" and "Richard Hazlewood." It was rather a pity, therefore, in view of the great success achieved by the other members of the cast of last night's production at the Theatre Royal, that Mr. McQuade did not fully realise that so much depended on him. Apart from this, however, and to be critical when people are working for the great cause may seem unsympathetic—nothing but praise can be bestowed and the frequent salvos of applause that greeted the performers from a crowded "house" were always thoroughly deserved.

Many people must have read "The Witness for the Defence," but for those who have not the following brief outline may be of interest. Drifting to India on the death of her parents, Stella Ballantyne (as she became) meets and marries for the want of something better to do—an Indian Civil Servant. The curtain rises on this pair after six years of married life, which has been a complete failure. They are in a tent on the borders of Rajputana. Ballantyne is steeped in India—and alcohol—and has become a beast. His descent has been assisted by the fact that he lives in fear of an Indian agitator, whom he could bring to justice by a photograph in his possession. Ballantyne has invited to dinner a tourist, Henry Thresh, who, unknown to him, loved "Stella" in England, but gave her up so that he might obtain fame by hard work. Thresh is shocked to find his former sweetheart so cowed and broken in spirit. He soon detects the cause, for husband and wife quarrel at dinner and the wife leaves the table. The men converse awkwardly and, while doing so, Ballantyne imagines that he sees a long, thin, brown arm come from under the tent and reach towards his despatch-box. Just before Thresh leaves, "Stella" returns, intent on killing herself, this frame of mind being induced by the contrast between Thresh, and her husband and thoughts of what might have been. Ballantyne is outside the tent at the time, and when Thresh leaves, Stella rushes for her shot-gun. She has mislaid the shots, however, and while she is standing in the room holding the weapon in her hands, Thresh returns because he has forgotten his pipe. When Thresh has gone Ballantyne comes back, maddened with drink and the recollection of the "scene" at dinner. He sees his wife with the gun, and makes a wild rush at her.

The curtain descends, and in the next act (two years later in England) we learn that Mrs. Ballantyne was tried for the murder of her husband and acquitted because of the evidence of Thresh, who told and coloured the story of the thin, brown arm, but never uttered one word about what he saw when he went back to the tent for his pipe. Upon her return to England and Little Bedding, the place of her birth, the inevitable happens to Stella. The news of the sensational trial in which she took such a tragic part has preceded her, and she is an object of awed wonder—for there was a doubt about the cause of her husband's death, even though she was acquitted. She falls in love with the squire's son, "Richard Hazlewood" and he with her. The squire, a dear old man whose aim in life has been consistency—in fact, he is a consistent crank—is fond of Stella in a fatherly way, and also because he wishes to appear consistent to his creed. Then enter the tormentors in the shape of Mr. and Mrs. Pettifer, relatives of the Hazlewoods. Pettifer is a solicitor and has doubts about the verdict at the Indian murder trial. Mrs. Pettifer looks upon the beautiful Stella as a murderess and an adventuress, and warns old Hazlewood of the possible developments of the friendship existing between his son and Stella. The father laughs at the idea of any developments, but, almost before his laughter has died away, the son bounces into the room and announces that he has proposed to Stella, been accepted, and "the marriage will take place soon." This is a poser for all the members of the family, and old Hazlewood's consistency shows distinct signs of weakening. The signs are so distinct, indeed, that Stella feels the icy barrier which is being raised, and contracts a secret marriage with Richard Pettifer and Hazlewood, senior, again discuss the trial, and, as a result Thresh—the only man who knows the truth—as Pettifer describes him—is induced to visit Little Bedding, ostensibly to inspect Mr. Hazlewood's collection of miniatures. Soon after his arrival Thresh discovers the trap set for him and receives a surreptitious note from Stella containing a plea for mercy at the cost of his veracity. The solicitor cross-examines Thresh, who is a barrister, at some length, but Thresh sticks to his previous evidence, despite the fact that he believes Stella did shoot her husband. The Pettifers are satisfied, and the "marriage" preparations proceed apace. There is, however, one more lash for Stella, and this from her saviour, Thresh, who urges her to tell her "prospective" husband exactly what occurred in the tent at Rajputana. Stella says she cannot, but finally promises to do so later on in their married life. This does not satisfy Thresh, and, as a way out of the difficulty, he asks Stella to go away with him. It is then that Stella informs Thresh that young Hazlewood is already her husband. Thresh almost collapses under the blow, and then, softening, asks Stella to tell him what took place in the tent after he left. Stella admits that when her husband returned from wishing him bon voyage, he swore at her, and then rushed at her. She became numb—and awoke to consciousness to see him laying prostrate at her feet. "Then I knew that all my troubles were at an end," adds Stella, "and I went to bed and slept." This scene between Stella and Thresh takes place in Hazlewood's house at a very early hour in the morning, and Hazlewood, senior, hearing voices, comes down to the drawing room and finds Stella and Thresh alone. There is another "scene," and, as the result of explanations, it is insisted that Stella must make a clean breast of the matter to her husband on the following morning. She does so, Hazlewood accepts her story quite complacently, and decides to "live happily ever afterwards." Thresh goes back to legal documents, and old Hazlewood to his consistency. It is a weak ending to a tense story, splendidly acted.

The bulk of the work fell on Mrs. Logan ("Stella") and Mr. Lee ("Thresh"), both of whom achieved a great success, Mrs. Logan especially so. They have many strong passages together, especially when Stella tells her story, and never once did they prove unequal to the dramatic situations. Mr. Lee was splendid as the censorious friend, and the combination was much above the usual level of amateur effort. As "Mr. and Mrs. Pettifer," Mr. Bird and Mrs. Thornton were delightfully natural. Mr. Bird had a lot to do in Act 2, and his cross-examination of the barrister was a fine piece of acting. Mr. Northcote was as good as ever as the cranky old squire, but he was not too well supported by Mr. McQuade, who was rather too casual as a lover in such a romantic love affair as that between Stella and himself. Mr. Sinclair, as the besotted husband, was only seen in the first act, when he infused into the role all the realism necessary. We should have preferred to see him as "Richard Hazlewood." Mr. W. Charters as "Hubbard" (a man servant) and "Baram Singh," was quite good, while Mr. G. Macgregor did all that was required of him in the minor part of an Indian servant. All are to be heartily congratulated. A word of acknowledgment is due to Mr. W. A. Cornell, who prepared the scenery. The tent in India was most effective, and so was the drawing-room of "Hazlewood's" house. Mr. Bowen Farthington was the prompter, and Mr. Denman-Fuller had charge of the lighting. The full cast was as follows:—

Henry Thresh, Mr. N. Lee.
Stella Ballantyne, Mrs. W. Sinclair.
Richard Hazlewood, Mr. M. S. Northcote.
"Hubbard," Mr. W. Charters.
"Baram Singh," Mr. G. Macgregor.
"Stella Ballantyne," Mrs. W. Logan.
"Mrs. Pettifer," Mrs. Thornton.
"Baram Singh," Mr. W. Charters.
"A Servant," Mr. G. Macgregor.

The music supplied by an orchestra from the Middlesex Regiment was in keeping with the character of the play, and was rendered in a manner that reflected great credit on the musicians and their capable conductor (Mr. Lawrie Owen). The programme was as follows:—March, "Coronation" (Ed. St. Quentin); Morceau, "A Norwegian Episode" (Theo. Bendix); Intermezzo, "Under the Palms" (Eric Olsen); Overture, "Morning, Noon and Night" (F. Suppe); Characteristic, "In a Pagoda" (J. Bratton).

CHINESE WOMAN'S ATTEMPTED SUICIDE DRIVEN TO DESPAIR BY HER HUSBAND'S ILL-TREATMENT.

A pathetic story was related at the Hongkong Magistracy, yesterday, before Mr. J. R. Wood, by a Chinese woman, who was charged with attempting to commit suicide by drowning at Sai Kok on Monday.

"I prefer to die than to live," declared the defendant, "because my husband is always beating me." Serjt. Spear said he made inquiries of the inmates of the house where the defendant and her husband lived, and learned that the husband had often neglected to provide food for his wife for days together. She had no relatives to whom she could apply to for assistance. Mr. J. R. Wood remanded the case for reference to the Secretary for Chinese Affairs.

HONGKONG MAGISTRACY. UNLAWFUL POSSESSION OF OPIUM.

A Chinese pleaded guilty to being in unlawful possession of seventeen tins of prepared opium.

Revenue Officer Clarke said the opium was contained in seven parcels concealed round defendant's waist. The opium came from Saigon.

Defendant said a stranger had engaged him to carry the opium.

Mr. J. R. Wood fined defendant $1,200, with the alternative of six months' hard labour.

PICKING POCKETS.

A Chinese was charged with picking the pockets of another Chinese in a tram-car opposite the King Edward Hotel.

The complaint stated that defendant was seated near him. Suddenly complainant felt a tug at his coat and, looking round, noticed defendant getting off the car. He examined his coat and was surprised to find that the pockets had been cut. Chase was given, and the defendant was arrested near the Mercantile Bank.

Serjt. Blackman said defendant underwent fourteen days' imprisonment some years ago. He was then banished, but returned from banishment and was sentenced to a further term of six months' imprisonment. He was then banished for a term of five years.

Mr. Dyer Bull sentenced defendant to twelve months' hard labour.

CHINESE JOURNALISTS VISITING JAPAN.

PRESIDENT'S PARTING WORDS.

A party of Chinese journalists left Peking to visit Japan by special invitation on the 11th. Before going they were received by President Feng Kuochang who impressed on them the importance of using their pens to cultivate friendly relations with Japan. "It is my earnest hope," he said, "that after your arrival in Japan, you will make a careful study of the commercial and industrial conditions in that country. With the information brought back by you as a result of your close inquiries and observations, you will do a world of good to your countrymen. Regarding the cultivation of friendly feelings between these two countries, it is necessary for us to deal with one another with justice and fairness. Only in this way can permanent friendly relations between these two countries be secured."

Mr. H. P. White was, as usual, an efficient and witty auctioneer.

The Hon. Mr. Holyoak said it was hoped that a sum of $50,000 would be raised as a result of the day's proceedings, and, with the War Bonds, a sum of $20,000 would be raised by the Hongkong St. George's Society. (Applause.)

Among those present were H.E. the Governor, Lady May, and Miss May, who were accompanied by Major-General Ventris. His Excellency was met at the entrance to the Theatre by a guard of honour composed of members of the St. John Ambulance Brigade.

PEKING NOTES

[FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.]

PEKING, April 11th.

POLITICAL.

There seems to be no intention on the part of the North to relax the military efforts directed against the South. Tuna Chi-jui and his associates, while insisting upon fighting the South until a decision has been obtained or the South has evinced a more conciliatory attitude, is at the same time anxious for peace; but the suggestion of peace is unacceptable to many of the Peiyang party who, while approving of the object of the Premier's policy, differ somewhat as to the means to be employed to attain that end. Ni Szu-chung, the Anhui Tschun, one of the leaders of the expeditionary force against the rebels, has come to Peking, and it is believed that his visit will strengthen the moderates of the fighting party. In other words, he is expected to endorse the Premier's policy. The other General left behind, Chang Chin-yao, has also been invited to come to Peking to assist in the councils of the party. That is the avowed object of the invitation addressed to the General, but it may be that it is inspired by the fear that he may become too powerful.

Meanwhile, the South is making an effort to retrieve its prestige. Southern forces are marching on Ichang, but it is expected that General Wu's army will prevent the realisation of their objective. Lung Chi-kwang, who is keeping the Government flag flying in Kwangtung, appears to be unable to make much headway against his opponents owing to lack of ammunition and funds, and he has appealed to Peking for the necessary assistance, presumably not in vain. It is obvious then that further fighting may be anticipated, that is, provided Japan does not feel called upon to intervene and insist upon the belligerents coming to terms and employing their arms in an effort to deal with the common foe, believed to be threatening the Northern borders of China and endangering the peace of the Far East.

JOURNALISTIC AMENITIES.

Some eighteen journalists, representing fifteen newspapers in Peking, have arranged to visit Japan in accordance with a programme drawn up by the Japanese, and they will leave on their visit to-night or to-morrow. They will be entertained by Pressmen in the Island Empire, and given opportunities of appreciating Japanese intentions towards China, so it is to be hoped they will return to their work imbued with ideas different from those inculcated in the capital itself.

RAILWAY PROGRESS.

In these days of impecuniosity it is pleasant to have it reported by the Ministry of Communications that the railways of China yielded no less than eight million dollars revenue more than last year, despite civil war and other afflictions. The 6,000 miles of railways in China are, it must be conceded, tolerably well administered, and if the greatly-needed construction work for the lines already sanctioned could be proceeded with the benefit to the Government and to the interested areas would be immeasurable.

THE PEKING-TUNGCHOW HIGHWAY.

The new main road under construction between Tungchow and the capital is a striking illustration of the axiom that out of evil good cometh. Had it not been for the disastrous floods which devastated Chihli last autumn and rendered so many thousands destitute, this work, it may be asserted without fear of contradiction, would not have been undertaken for years to come. The need for finding employment for so many starving people, however, directed thoughts to this desirable project, with the result that the work commenced in the winter is nearly completed, and within a week or so this great highway will be opened to traffic. It is barely 20 miles in length, but its construction will be of immense benefit.

PLAGUE.

Plague is practically ended. Reports indicate that no further deaths from this cause are occurring in the known areas, but, as it is possible that the pest may still exist in non-visited areas, the plague prevention machinery is being maintained in working order so as to guard against emergencies. When the areas in question have been inspected it may be presumed that a clean bill of health will be issued for Shansi and Chihli, not to speak of the Mongolian borderland.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Much interest is being manifested in the works of the Russian artist, M. Jacobell, who has been for several months in the capital making studies. An exhibition of his paintings, which took place within the Russian Legation was largely attended, more especially as the proceeds were to be devoted to Allied Red Cross Funds.

HONGKONG, 24TH APRIL, 1918

THE TRIUMPH OF OUR AIRMEN.

During the great struggle which has been waged on the Western Front for the past month repeated tributes have been paid to the wonderful work of our Air service, which appears to have fully maintained its supremacy. This is the more remarkable in view of the great preparations made by the Germans in the winter to challenge it, for, in a constantly developing art such as flying, superiority fluctuates. The best of services has to be content with a general predominance, punctuated by sharply defined superiority at critical times. From this test our air services emerge supreme. The moral of the contest is well pointed by the Germans themselves, for their reports are able to go into great detail with regard to casualties to our machines. Not only are the names of machines and engines given, but their numbers are quoted and the names and ranks of our pilots and observers, whether wounded or killed. Our inability to attain the same accuracy with regard to German casualties indicates the important fact that we are fighting over or behind their lines, our machines and their falling, as a rule, on enemy soil. They can verify our losses; we must estimate theirs. In short, the German lists are an eloquent testimony to the consistent manner in which we carry the war into the enemy's ranks. The operations of our Flying Corps on other fronts have naturally been conducted on a much smaller scale than in the West, but the work done has been equally efficient. In Mesopotamia, Palestine, and East Africa the activity of our airmen in raiding and reconnaissance and in the maintenance of long-distance communication over difficult country has contributed in the most signal manner to the successes achieved. During the attack on Kut and the advance down the Tigris to Baghdad, no enemy pontoon, steamer or camp within the area of operations was safe from them, and they were personally congratulated by the Army Commander for their skilful co-operation with the guns. After the occupation of Baghdad, owing to the distant and scattered dispositions of the retiring enemy, our General Staff had to rely more than ever on aeroplanes for obtaining quick and accurate information of Turkish movements, and for maintaining close co-operation with our advancing columns. Long-distance flights were made daily over new country, and our commanders kept punctually informed of every change of disposition either in the enemy's forces or our own. The intense heat of a record hot season, the mirages and sand and windstorms which are prevalent in Mesopotamia at that period of the year, interfered with flying as with every other activity, but even in the hottest months the work of the Corps went on, and by the beginning of last October all sections of the area of operations had been methodically photographed and mapped up to date. The value of such work has been strikingly illustrated in the Palestine campaign. The excellent mapping of the neighbourhoods of Gaza and Beersheba is said to have contributed very greatly to the victories which were the prelude to the subsequent advance on Jaffa and Jerusalem. As for the dangers of competition with the British airmen, the enemy has had experience of them on this front also, where it appears to be our habit scrupulously to calculate the weight of all bombs dropped, and return, with equal exactitude, four times the same weight on the Turkish lines.

The Germans from the first have acted on the principle that the area of hostilities is not confined to the area of the combatants, but embraces the countries of the nations at war, and in many Zeppelin and aeroplane raids they have attempted to cripple industries and terrorise civilians. We, on the other hand, maintained that it was not only more humane but ultimately more effective to bomb the enemy in the zone of combat, in his camps, his rest-billets, his depots, and above all, his aerodromes. This, with increasing volume and success, we have consistently done. Our air services, both naval and military, have combined to make his Belgian aerodromes scarcely defensible. More than one German raid on London has been abandoned because the machines detailed for this duty had been previously destroyed by our airmen in their sheds. The persistent German air-raids over London and the south-eastern English Counties, however, reluctantly compelled the British Government last autumn to modify the principle on which all our raiding had hitherto been conducted, and to adopt a policy of reprisals, in conjunction with the French. As a result the Rhine towns have been made to feel more intimately the consequences of the policy on which Germany has acted throughout the war, and already the suggestion has been made in the Reichstag that an agreement should be entered into by all the belligerents to cease all air-raids outside the war-zone. In this matter, as in the use of poison-gas, which the Germans introduced and are now anxious to discontinue, we have shown that we can beat the enemy at their own game.

CANTON NEWS.

[BY COURTESY OF THE "CHUNG NGOI SAN PO."]

CANTON, April 23rd.

THE YUET HAN RAILWAY. It is reported that the Tsuchun who was dissatisfied with the action of Dr. Sun Yat-sen in appointing directors to take charge of the Yuet Han Railway Company, has also appointed two directors to control the Company's affairs. We understand that the officials appointed by Dr. Sun have resigned.

SALT REVENUE.

It is reported that the Tsuchun has ordered the director of the China Bank in Canton to detain all the salt revenue, which he intends to send to the Peking Government.

MILITARY MOVEMENTS.

Chief Commander Li Kan-yuen started with a large army for the northern borders yesterday.

Commanders Li Lieh-kwan, and Lam-fu have decided to lead their armies to meet the northern troops.

Commander Lau Chi-luk has reported that he is returning to Canton with his army.

SWATOW REPORTS.

Commander Chan Kwang-ming reports that three regiments of Fukien troops have declared independence from the Fukien Tsuchun, and have occupied several districts in the south of Fukien. Other troops are joining them, and they have promised to co-operate with the Canton expeditionary forces.

NAM HUNG RE-CAPTURED.

The Tsuchun has received a report which states that the Yunan troops have reconquered Nam Hung, which was occupied by northern troops, last night. The Tsuchun has ordered his son, Mok Ching-chang, to lead his army to reinforce the Yunan troops on the northern borders.

THE MILLION DOLLAR OPIUM CASE.

JUDGMENT FOR DEFENDANTS ON ALL ISSUES.

The local cause célèbre, the million dollar opium case, which occupied the attention of the local Supreme Court for over 120 days and created a local record in lengthy hearings, was concluded yesterday, judgment being awarded the defendants in all the issues which were involved.

The case was the outcome of the winding-up proceedings of the Yue Hing Co., Ltd. The claim in this case was one for damages by the liquidator appointed in the winding-up proceedings against two of the directors of the Company—Lee Hy San and Ma Choo Lang—and against a firm called the Po Yuen firm for conspiring together to deprive the Company by fraud of more than 100 chests of opium, the property of the Company. The trial of the case commenced in December, 1916, and the hearing occupied the Court over 120 days, and was finally concluded in January last, judgment being reserved.

The Puisne Judge, Mr. Justice Gompertz, who tried the case, delivered a very lengthy judgment yesterday morning, and at the conclusion said: "Rattling to myself questions as I would to a jury upon the issues I have been trying, my answers to them are as follows: Did the Yue Hing Company sell to the Li-Wang Syndicate 100 chests of opium on the 22nd April, 1913?—Yes.

Was this done with the approval, tacit or express, of the Directors?—Yes.

Was the best price of the day obtained?—Yes.

Was the purchase-money paid to the Company?—As to the balance of the purchase-money—it was certainly paid. As to the lack which is in controversy, the question is a difficult one. There is a good deal more than that I do not understand. I am not, upon the evidence, prepared to say it was not paid. So the answer is "Yes."

The counsel who appeared in the case were the Hon. Mr. B. E. Pollock, K.C., and Mr. F. C. Jenkin, C.B.E. (instructed by Messrs. Hastings & Hastings) for the plaintiffs; Mr. C. G. Alabaster, O.B.E., and Mr. Eldon Potter (instructed by Messrs. Wilkinson & Grist) for the defendants.

SCENE OF NEXT BIG ATTACK.

(The first part of this message is missing.)

All onslaughts so far have failed to attain their object, owing to the impossibility of using reserves, and has resulted in bottling up one and a half million men in the triangle of Hazebrouk, Amiens and Noyon. These, originally supplied with a week's rations, are practically starving in a devastated region, and which are difficult to revictual as the ground is marshy and pitted with shellholes and is constantly under fire. There is great concentration of shell-fire on Mount Kemmel, which has already stripped the trees. This, probably, will be the scene of the next big attack.

Details of the Belgian success in the 17th inst. show most brilliant and also the most important results, for it played a part in following an attempt to cut-off the expected British retreat in the Ypres salient.

General Plumer has congratulated the Belgian commander very warmly, saying that the Second British Army is most grateful for their help.

GENERAL NEWS.

LONDON, April 22nd.

12.20 p.m.

Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig reports: "There was a strong local attack accompanied by heavy shelling last night against our positions in the neighbourhood of Messin and northward of Albert. After sharp fighting, during which the enemy captured an advanced post, the attack was repulsed."

We improved our positions slightly at night-time in the Villers-Bretonneux, Albert and Bapaume sectors.

We captured prisoners and machine-guns during the various raids southward and northward of Lens.

There was considerable mutual artillery firing in different sectors, the enemy's being chiefly directed to our positions astride the Somme and Ancre, also in the neighbourhood of Festubert and the Noyon Forest.

UNSINKABLE SHIPS.

BULKHEAD DEVICE WHICH MAY FOIL U. BOATS.

In these days, when the cry is for "ships, ships, and more ships," the man who can design ships that are "unsinkable" by a torpedo is a friend in need to his country.

Mr. J. W. Isherwood, of 4, Lloyd's Avenue, E.C., the naval architect, claims to be that national benefactor. In an interview with a Daily Express representative Mr. Isherwood said:

"My reason for advertising so extensively is to compel the attention of the Government to my designs. The Government knows that this is my object, for I have made no secret of it. I assert that 50 per cent. of the merchant ships that have been sunk by U. boats could have been saved if they had been built with bulkheads in the proportion of about one for every 40ft. of their length."

"It is quite an easy matter," said Mr. Isherwood, "to build a ship which cannot be sunk by one torpedo—and, as a rule, that is sufficient to sink the ships of the mercantile marine to-day. I maintain that if the Glenartney Castle, the hospital ship sunk in the Bristol Channel on Tuesday morning, had been fitted with ten instead of six water-tight compartments she would have remained afloat. The same applies to practically all ships that have gone down as the result of one torpedo."

"The saving in life, material, and food," he added, "cannot be estimated, but it would be great. I want to see a commission appointed to go thoroughly into this vital matter. For a whole year I have tried to get the authorities to act. In November last the Deputy Shipping Controller wrote as follows: 'The whole question of floatability has been decided on general principles, and I am therefore unable to take advantage of the proposals in the meantime. I shall, however, keep the plans before me for consideration should a different position arise.'"

Mr. Isherwood mentioned, in support of his claims that the American Government is making provision for additional bulkheads to be fitted in all merchant ships under construction to minimize the danger from U. boats. He also said that ten existing ships could be refitted with the necessary additional bulkheads in the time it takes to build one ship."

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE CATHEDRAL REGULA- TIONS.

Sir,—As the seconder to the main amendment to the Cathedral Regulations proposed by Mr. Looker at the meeting of the seatholders and subscribers of the Cathedral, yesterday afternoon, may I be allowed to emphasize that the resolution before the meeting was not one concerning qualification for a seat on a Cathedral Body, but it concerned the temporary appointment of additional representatives to sit with that Body for a special purpose. I cannot conceive of any member of the Church of England being appointed for such a purpose nor of his being willing to serve for that object who is not in full sympathy with the aim and object of Christian worship and activities. There are numbers of members of the Church of England in Hongkong who value the Church's ministrations, as was admitted by several speakers at the meeting, but who, for one cause or another, are not frequent in attendance at Holy Communion—the Lord's Supper. Surely some of such men are qualified to say whether they consider this or that chaplain is the more likely to suit and to serve the spiritual interests of the Colony. The qualifications of a Chaplain have been defined in sub-section 1 of section 3 of the Cathedral Ordinance as stated in the papers.

On the question of frequent "communication" this is not the place to enlarge. I yield to no one in a sense of the value of the means of grace which the Holy Communion offers to us, but I do feel that undue emphasis can be placed on, and a false value attached to, constant attendance at that Holy Table, frequently mis-called an Altar. Attendance may become mechanical, and spiritual significance lost to sight if constant attendance at the early service is regarded as all-important. And harm is done to the Christian activities of the Colony if we emphasize the one service and, by so doing, minimize the spirit that should breathe in all the services. A sense of proportion is very important. The tendency is, or the danger is, it is not to lose sight of the activities of the pastor in the importance attached to the ministrations of a priest, sacerdos, and not presbyter, elder.

It is because I am in sympathy with the desire to see a wider interest taken in the services and activities of Christian work that I seconded the resolution as amended by the speaker—I am, etc., A. H. HARRIS.

EXPERIMENTING WITH A WIRELESS INSTALLATION.

TWO WELL-KNOWN CHINESE YOUNG MEN FINED.

At the Hongkong Magistracy, yesterday, before Mr. Dyer Ball, Harry Sling and William Ming, two well-known Chinese young men who are members of the Chinese Y.M.C.A., were charged, on remand, with erecting a wireless installation at No. 122, Des Voeux Road Central.

Mr. E. Davidson, who appeared for the defendants, said he would tender a plea of guilty subject to the understanding that the prosecution were not pressing the matter and that they would be satisfied by a nominal fine and the confiscation of the wireless apparatus. If the police did not agree to this course he would show the Magistrate that the offence was merely a technical one.

Mr. T. H. King, A.S.P., who prosecuted, said the police did not intend to press the charge, as they were satisfied that the apparatus was used for experimental purposes. He proposed to ask the Magistrate for the confiscation of the apparatus at 122, Des Voeux Road, but he did not think he was justified in asking for the confiscation of the apparatus which had been found at Breezy Point. He thought, however, that the Magistrate could have no doubt that the bulk of the apparatus seized at Breezy Point was part of the wireless to be used. He was not an expert in wireless telegraphy, but he thought the apparatus was capable of receiving messages from a distance of fifty miles. He asked the Magistrate to order the defendants to be of good behaviour and not to use the wireless apparatus for twelve months at least.

The Magistrate: I think you have no objection to that, Mr. Davidson?

Mr. Davidson: I have no objection to it, but I hope that no stigma will be attached to my clients.

Mr. King: I wish to state that when the police went to them the defendants were aware that they were committing some mischief because a part of the wireless apparatus was hurried out of the window.

Mr. Davidson: That is alleged against one of the defendants, Mr. Sling.

Mr. Dyer Ball said he would accept the plea and inflict a nominal fine, but he wished the defendants to sign a bond to be of good behaviour for twelve months. That, however, did not mean that they were bad characters. They must understand that they were not at liberty to use the wireless apparatus in the future, and if they intended to carry out any experiments they should first consult someone who knew about the matter. Mr. Dyer added: I find in the charge-sheet that the second defendant is described as follows:—W. Ming, 30, Austria. I suppose that is a mistake.

Mr. Davidson: Yes, I have papers to prove that defendant came from Australia.

Mr. Dyer Ball (to defendants): Very well, you are fined $25 each, and must enter into a bond of $100 each to be of good behaviour for twelve months. The wireless apparatus is confiscated.

AN EWO MANS HEROIC PER- FORMANCE IN THE AIR.

A letter from Lieut. A. M. Scott, 100 Argyle and Sutherland Highlanders, who went home about a year ago, says: "Young Joe Radcliffe of Jagger's has been doing great things. He went into the Flying Corp, had been gassed, but had to do three more flights to get his wings, viz., pass as pilot. The story I heard was that when the persistent raids were on over London he went up one night in an old biplane, only doing 50. He was soon in the thick of things. Five Gothas doing 120 mph for him, but Rad. managed to keep off and fought all the way from Croydon to Brighton, about 22 miles, when he got smashed. Shot in the thigh, he fell in the calf and one in the chest. Coming down he smashed into a tree and didn't know anything till he awoke in hospital. Rather a good start!"

Lieut. Scott, since writing the above, had an accident practising bombing and is recently in hospital; his injuries were slight.

STRIKING FORECAST OF GERMANY'S INTENTIONS.

AN UNHEDED WARNING.

The following article, which appeared in The Times in October, 1907, on the subject of The Hague Conference, is a remarkable forecast of Germany's intentions, and had greater attention been paid to it at the time we should not have been so badly caught napping:—

"The German statesman does not lay down a mere proposition in the abstract. He assures us that his countrymen will always fulfil most strictly 'the duties of humanity and civilization,' and he proudly refuses to admit that any country in the world excels Germany in her 'right of naval warfare.' They reserve the right to throw the great highway of the sea with deadly engines when and where they please to the imminent danger of neutral commerce. They reserve the right of fortifying placing such engines off the coasts and harbours of the enemy they desire to assail, without regard for the merchant shipping which is certain to be destroyed without a chance of escape. They reserve the right to establish by the use of mines a species of so-called blockade uncontrolled by those mitigations in favour of neutrals which the most rigid and conservative of international jurists have hitherto allowed. Baron Marschall promises, indeed, that they will use 'the rights' sparingly; they will not resort to these methods of barbarism unless for military reasons of an absolutely urgent character. They will not use them. Then, of course, the 'law of facts' must prevail. 'It is indeed, the profound respect which Germany gives her adhesion to provisions which she knows that she would not keep. The authority of the law, Baron Marschall explained to the Conference, would be lessened if it were restricted to clauses the execution of which is possible from a military point of view—'is possible, even in exceptional circumstances.' So the world is left with nothing stronger than the rage of the Convention to protect it, supplemented, on the one hand, by Baron Marschall's unwritten law of humanity and civilization, and on the other, by such remedies as Sir Ernest Satow's warning may foreshadow. The failure of Count Tornielli's committee on the other main subject referred to it is equally humiliating. It has left unsettled all the problems which threatened the peace of the world during the Russo-Japanese war, and it has made them more dangerous than before, by treating as yet open to controversy doctrines and practices long condemned by established law and usage. The last days of the Conference are being mainly devoted to the melancholy task of embalming in the shape of vague successive fancies in which its practical labours have for the most part terminated. The debate at The Hague have at least one conspicuous advantage, from which, if we are wise, we may profit. They have laid bare the degrees of sincerity and of insincerity in which the several Powers worship peace, and they have revealed not obscurely the fashion in which some of them hope on occasion to wage war."

GERMANS AND ITALIANS. BRUTALITY TO PRISONERS.

Reuter's Agency has received copies of carefully verified sworn statements which have been received from British soldiers who have returned from German prisoner camps and hospitals as to the systematic brutality practised upon Italian prisoners. These emanate not from one particular centre only, but from over a dozen different parts of Germany, and are confirmed by independent testimony. They are all of recent origin, as the persons by whom the evidence is given have lately left Germany, the majority having been released from the camps in question only a month ago. In regard to the camp at Langensala evidence has been received from over a dozen independent sources. Some of it is given below:

Private J. Taylor, Essex Regiment, says: "In November about 2,000 Italian prisoners were brought in and put in a separate part of the camp behind barbed wire. They were unnecessarily knocked about by the non-commissioned officers and guards who struck them with rifle butts, and scabbards. The Italians seemed dazed, and used to rush for their soup, which was the supposed cause of the guards' brutality."

Lance-Corporal Horace Hills, Suffolk, says: "Five or six thousand Italians came in. They had travelled three or four days, and had had nothing at all to eat. After they arrived soup was brought in, and as they were starving they rushed at it. The Germans then dashed forward, and stabbed them with their swords and bayonets, and killed and wounded a lot. Seven or eight Italians were dying of starvation every day in the camp. They had no parcels. I saw an Englishman give an Italian bread, and the Italian went down on his knees and kissed his hands."

Lance-Corporal H. J. Dadd, London Regiment, says: "There is a strong feeling amongst the English prisoners that something should be done for the Italian prisoners, who are being badly fed and generally pulled and knocked about, and who are the cause of a day through starvation and misery."

From Dulmen camp there are also many independent witnesses of the way in which Italian prisoners are treated. Private Vaughan says the Italians are shamefully kicked and knocked about in every way. Private Lee says Italian prisoners are treated worse than others. Lance-Corporal Greig says the Italians were brought in in a terrible state, and absolutely starving. "We used to give them our German ration whenever we could manage it, and they ate it ravenously." Private Baxter says the 2,000 Italians in Dulmen are starving, and absolutely mad with hunger.

From Cassel Trooper Findlay reports that the Italians are worse treated than the British, and that they are struck and pushed about by the German corporals. Bandman Elinson saw an Italian bayoneted for going round asking for soup.

At Mannheim the same brutality is practised, particularly towards the Italians. Private Kelly says that the Italians travelled for twelve days on three issues of soup. They badly rushed for food and some were bayoneted."

From Munster camp Private Redding reports: "The behaviour of the Germans to the Italians became much worse since their recent large captures."

Similar evidence comes from Zerbet, where Italian prisoners had arrived after a five days' journey without food, and were driven back by the Germans with drawn swords when they sought to get soup. At Helm camp the Italians were nearly starving, and fought like dogs for a bit of bread thrown to them by the British prisoners. At Friedricksfeld the treatment of the Italians were equally barbarous, and the sentries shot them for trying to get food from the British. Equally revolting stories come from Ohdrum, Nannenburg, Stendal, Soltan Limburg, and Hamburg."

LADY BATHURST.

FIGHTS "TIMES" AND "DAILY MAIL."

Lady Bathurst, the proprietor of the London Morning Post, again appears in the spotlight when, by proceedings instituted by the Government, the editor, Mr. H. A. Brynne, and the military correspondent, Colonel Repington, were fined 2100 each, and costs for the publication of an article in the Post assailing the Government and the War Cabinet for the conduct of the war in France.

Lady Bathurst, as the sole surviving child, inherited the paper from her father, the late Lord Glenesk, who died on eight years ago. She took active charge of the paper, and the journalistic reputation which she was actually for the main part, the office of the Post, for the staff whom she had brought with her when she considered her husband's grounds for finding fault. INDUSTRY AFTER THE WAR

DR. ADDISON'S PLANS.
ATTITUDE OF LABOUR.

The Lord Mayor of London welcomed the representatives of many interests associated with the industry of the country at the Guildhall, when the Industrial Reconstruction Council, which has been formed to direct public attention to problems that will arise at the end of the war, held its inaugural meeting. Lord Burnham presided.

The Lord Mayor said the subjects which they were to consider were of vital importance to the well-being, not only of the United Kingdom, but of the British Empire. (Cheers.) They were looking forward to the period that would follow when the war was over. But we were at war still, and he confessed that his predilections leaned towards the concentration and conservation of their entire forces to the successful prosecution of the war. (Cheers.) The war was, in his judgment, for us everything we could wish. The war, he said, was a great thing, but it was a great thing that much else would be lost. (Hear, hear.) With the knowledge that they would allow no problems to divert their energies from the prosecution of the war, he hoped that they would have a successful conference. (Cheers.)

OBJECTS OF RECONSTRUCTION COUNCIL.

Mr. Ernest J. P. Benn, in explaining the objects of the Industrial Reconstruction Council, said it was a body of enthusiasts banded together to push one idea which would help them to understand better some of the industrial problems which now lie before the nation. They were trying to strike a new note. (Hear, hear.) The Industrial Reconstruction Council set out to preach the doctrine of self-government for industry. The complete organization of every trade—every man in his union, every employer in his association—(hear, hear)—and from each industry, with proper official status and adequate powers, in this way they would bring out the great fund of public spirit which existed within our trades. They would get nearer to the ideal when industry was recognized as one of the highest forms of national service; and they would do something to lay the foundations of peace and prosperity in the future. (Cheers.)

Dr. Addison said he was glad to have the opportunity to attend the meeting, because the pressing nature of the problems which would arise immediately on the cessation of hostilities was ever present to his mind. It was to give encouragement to the necessary preparations for dealing with the inevitable difficulties of the restoration period that he welcomed the formation of their association. Our armies in returning from the war would bring into our midst men changed from what they were before. (Hear, hear.) They would be national obligations which they had done their best to discharge. (Hear, hear.) What ever schemes we might devise in connection with reconstruction work, whether for improving our methods of production, supplies, housing, or health, or transport, or any other pressing matter, sooner or later all these things came down to a question of money. They must depend fundamentally upon our being able to pay for them. Therefore the governing consideration in all reconstruction matters was the increased production of wealth. Unless we could so dispose our national affairs that all men, employers and employed, could freely co-operate in an effort at increased wealth production, distress must be our lot. The war had taught us something which he hoped we should never forget—that we had latent in our people a great capacity to produce, once there was the unity of spirit and the determination to produce, which was quite unsuspected before. (Cheers.) And hence, we could rebuild our industries, and could increase and maintain our services for the benefit of all in the wide markets of the world. But unless we had industrial peace none of these things could be added unto us. (Hear, hear.)

INDUSTRIAL REORGANIZATION.

He referred to the invitation to different industries to form provisional reconstruction committees, and said he believed it was essential to the promotion of industrial peace that employers should belong to and observe the general arrangements of the employers' association, and that every workman should be in a trade union. (Hear, hear.) They would be asked to form a joint council, and it was proposed to recognize that joint body for whatever purpose the two parties to it might agree it should undertake. The employers' association would be invited to guide and help in their matters, and the workmen to assist in regard to those things which industrial organization could not do, and some things it ought not to do. No organization could promote the well-being of an industry by organizing industrial civil war. They could not promote the well-being of an industry by manipulating prices that kept their customers poor. They could not promote the well-being of an industry by fostering inefficiency in any form, and they could not help men who would not help themselves. Three things, he ventured to think, they ought not to try and do. They ought not to try and regulate the pace by the pace of the slowest. They ought not to provide any sort of encouragement to any sort of inefficiency anywhere; and, finally, they should not do anything which would fetter any man's freedom to make the best use he could of his own brains, skill, and enterprise. They could and ought to do a great many things. There ought to be no limitation of output, and our standard of unemployment should be revived. It was not for the good of an industry that there should be a standing margin of unemployed. (Cheers.) He would like to see the industries so organized themselves that they would be prepared to shoulder their full share of responsibility. They would be asked to promote research associations. There was a wealth of invention, ingenuity and resource in the craftsmen of the country which had never had a properly organized opportunity of adding its contribution to our national stock. They had made arrangements with the Colonial and India Office and the Department of Overseas Trade to collect and classify and place at the disposal of representative trade bodies collected information of the demands upon our industries from abroad. But all the arrangements would not avail them much unless the industries themselves were organized, and could manage to settle a good many of the differences which existed at the present time, and would agree upon one body of men who should represent them for specific purposes. (Hear, hear.)

Nobody would rejoice more than he would at the industries doing more for themselves and being troubled less and less by the central governing agencies. The emancipation from interference by Governmental agencies almost solely depended upon an increased degree of trade organization. We had almost unmeasured resources and capacities for development, but we could only achieve these things by getting away from party and parochial haggings—by getting away from the conditions in which one shop or one firm could throw a whole industry into confusion. (Hear, hear.) We could only do it by securing comprehensive, firm, and satisfactory industrial understandings. (Cheers.) The time to these things was not on the cessation of hostilities, when the turmoil and dislocation of the rearrangement incidental to demobilization were upon us. The time was now—(cheers)—when the need for sanity, constructive thought, and the abolition of recrimination was so urgent in the nation. We had clearly before us what unity of purpose could achieve. The spirit of our people was awakened. They had new hopes. They were impatient of old prejudices and old party and class disputes, and they were looking for a new and better order. (Cheers.)

Mr. G. H. Roberts said that, while we ought to give the war our first consideration, we ought not to pursue the policy of unpreparedness which characterized the nation precedent to the war. Just as the great need of the world was peace from the military point of view, it was equally imperative from the standpoint of Great Britain and the British Empire that industrial peace should be established. (Cheers.) If industrial strife was to succeed the war, recovery must be retarded; in fact, he believed, rendered absolutely impossible. We could not revert to the conditions that prevailed before the war. There had been a great awakening among all classes in the country. There had been a great revolution in the trenches and on the seas, and we must accept it as a certain fact that we had to provide means by which the conditions were established worthy of the splendid manhood which had been displayed in the war, and to facilitate that purpose was very largely, he understood, the object of that meeting. They must not think they could make progress by divorcing one class from another. We must provide means by which classes could come together in co-operation to serve the interests which they had in common. He was certain what they called the Whitley Council would go a long way towards establishing durable peace in industry, and moreover would soften and sweeten human relationship, and would thereby consolidate our country and make it stronger and more secure than heretofore. The worker was entitled to be taken into their confidence. The average workman knew comparatively little of the complexities and the delicate intricacies of trade. It was not his fault. He had been denied the opportunity of becoming acquainted with these things. Many employers, unfortunately, adopted this attitude, "I am going to run my business in my own way. It is no concern of yours, so long as I pay you your wages regularly." But it was a matter of importance to all engaged in the trade. If he was asked what the average man required in life he would sum it up in the words, "Sufficiency and security." (Hear, hear.) In order to satisfy his aspirations the worker had to be admitted into a larger share of industrial life and activities, and he was sure when the accredited representatives of the workpeople formed part of the new industrial councils they would soon develop a sense of responsibility based upon deeper knowledge, which would make for stability of thought and conduct in the community, and would be all the better for the particular industry concerned. (Cheers.) Employers must get rid of their objection to high wages. He wanted to see every workman assured of a wage that would provide him with all the necessities of life. And beyond that, he wanted plenty of elasticity in every industry to allow of the fullest exercise of brain, skill, and of experience, with the knowledge that the exercise of those qualities ought to be rewarded. There ought to be no limit placed upon the earning capacity of an individual. (Hear, hear.) An employer had no right to take labour without an adequate compensation. On the other hand, if workmen got the best possible then they ought to give the best possible return for those wages. They would find that there was as much genius and talent in the lower walks of society as would be found in any other. It was mainly a question of opportunity, and a nation suffered irreparable loss because of conditions which stifled and destroyed great qualities. (Hear, hear.)

DO IT NOW.

Mr. J. H. Whitley remarked that after the war would be too late for action. He would say to the men and women engaged in industry, "Do it now." His colleagues on the committee which drew up the report so much referred to began their work with the idea that their

SOLDIERS AND SUPERSTITION

SOME INTERESTING SPECIMENS.

The feeling of fatalism is strong among soldiers, says a correspondent of the New York World. Many hold the opinion that "if the bullet is not made for you, you won't be hit." One soldier boasts that he knows he will come through the war all right because during his latest battle a large piece of shrapnel on which he found his own initial fell at his feet.

"It was made for me all right," he said, "but it missed the mark so nothing else can kill me."

Mascots and luck-bringers of various sorts are numerous in all the armies. Tiny rabbits and black cats made of "lucky" metal are encountered more frequently than anything else. In many cases the charm which a soldier carries is something sent him by his womenfolk in the home-land—a thimble, a ring of a child's trinket that has been passed down in the family as a luck-bringer.

Among soldiers' superstitions, one of the most characteristic is connected with the number three. "The third time is never the same" is a proverb among the Irish troops. "The third of anything is fatal" is a common expression among the English country lathings. Soldiers have been known to refuse to take their third leave, feeling certain that it will be their last. A soldier's third wound is said to be the one which must be most carefully attended to. A development of this superstition prohibits the lighting of three cigarettes with one match.

Odd numbers, according to the British Tommy, are more likely to be unlucky than even ones, and thirteen is no worse than nine. Friday is an unlucky day, has been deteriorated, and there is no particular bad luck connected with any day of the week in Tommy's estimation. Sunday, however, is pre-eminently a lucky day for battles.

The luck flower, by common consent, is white hennery, and a piece tucked away inside the hennery is supposed to save the wearer from a fatal wound. Some regiments regard certain decorations and medals as unlucky in general. One very well known battalion objects strongly, every time one of its number receives the Military Cross.

As regimental pets, black cats are regarded as the luckiest, and the arrival of a stray animal of this colour at a gun-pit or dug-out is an event of importance. Every one is bound to be lucky for some hours at least. To meet a black cat while marching up to the trenches puts every member of the company in the happiest humour. On the other hand, a black magpie flying across the line of march is a bad omen.

REFERENCE FROM MR. ASQUITH AND HIS CABINET.

reference from Mr. Asquith and his Cabinet was to deal with an after the war problem; but they had not sat together for many weeks before they came to the deliberate conclusion that there was no such thing as a line between during the war and after the war. (Hear, hear.) "We came to the conclusion," Mr. Whitley added, "that the proposals which eventually with unanimity we agreed to recommend to the Government and to the nation should be put into operation with the least possible delay. We came to that conclusion for a variety of reasons. We believed that many of the most difficult of the war problems could have been solved with half of the trouble and with double the efficiency if the trades had had such organizations as we have now recommended. What business man is there, what workman is there, who has not felt that many of the things that have been ordered from Whitehall could have been done twice as quickly and four times as well by the people who spend all their lives in the business? (Cheers.) But these people had to intervene because you were not there. You were not equipped. And very often it is only when the business has been half-spilt that you and they have come halfway to the right thing. He had had many applications for copies of the report from all over the world. He had had more applications for copies from our officers and men in the trenches in France, Salonika, Palestine, and Egypt, and even in India than he had from people at home. He was speaking of personal applications made to him. To his mind that threw a tremendous responsibility upon them, who were not in the trenches, not to delay in achieving the plan which was recommended in the report. (Cheers.)

Mr. Ernest Beven remarked that he was one of those who were prepared, rather than tolerate the awful poverty and the brutal, inhuman conditions that had been imposed upon his class, deliberately to organize for revolt; but he was prepared to accept a reasonable alternative, provided they started upon a purely equal basis. They had to admit Labour to an equal status. That equal status had not yet been admitted. None of them who held the position of Labour representatives had deliberately called a strike; they had been forced to attack when they had been met with the adamant opposition of employers. (Hear, hear.) Labour had been asking for the machinery proposed by the Whitley report, but they had been refused. Employers had been asked to meet consultation boards and had refused. If there was a desire to construct machinery for the reconstruction period, Labour would be willing to meet them, but it might be free machinery to tackle the whole problem of industry. If Labour was to be asked to take responsibility during this reconstruction period to help the nation; then they must be prepared to give it equal responsibility in the management of the whole industry. Sir Wilfrid Stokes proposed: That this meeting give its warm approval to the proposals of the Industrial Reconstruction Council as a practical means of giving effect to the suggestions of the Whitley Report. Sir Herbert Field, M.P., seconded, and the motion was carried unanimously.

CLUBS IN RATIONS. Compulsory rationing, upon which ten million inhabitants of London and the Home Counties enter to-day, will have the effect of curtailing, even if it does not temporarily abolish, the ancient right of hospitality. With the principle of rigid rationing, with you cannot w freedom and confidence ask a friend to dine? For your guest may bring a (or her) card, or else be content with vegetable soup, a mouthful of fish, a kind of milk pudding, a morsel of chicken (if it can be had), and perhaps an apple. I find that most people are prepared to have meatless meals when they are away from home. There is the certainty of getting the full ration of five ounces three times a week, 15 ounces in all, and the feast is prepared at home, but cannot be certain in hotels and restaurants. The committee of the West End Club have had an anxious time preparing to accommodate themselves to rationing the members; and in one of the last
